

ABSTRACT

[0032] A method and apparatus for improving database concurrency are described. Upon receiving a request to access data, a data locality within a database may be determined utilizing unique data keys. An access to the data may be provided while locking part of the database based on a data locking level determined based on deadlock history corresponding to the data locality.

Attorney's Office